PLANTING TREES IS A NECESSITY

JUDICIOUS CARE, HOWEVER, SHOULD BE TAKEN WHERE THEY ARE PLACED

SUGGESTIONS FOR CARE

National Council of Horticulture Gives Timely Advice on the Matter.

Among persons who use more judgment than reason, or lack knowledge of the facts, it has become a habit to say it is a crime to cut down a tree and that it is always, under any circumstances, an act of great virtue to plant one.

To one who gives thought to the matter, these accepted principles may be reversed, and we can say with all seriousness and truth that there is no town in this country where the judicious use of the axe among trees in some neighborhood or other is not demanded; and on the other hand thousands of trees are being planted where no tree should be planted.

Each variety of fruit or ornamental tree when it reaches maturity under reasonably favorable conditions has its established size or spread of branches. Among the better shrubs trees this reaches 40-50 and even a greater number of feet in diameter. In dense forests we see the trees stretching up after life and sunlight, loading their side branches and becoming a collection of giant telegraph poles with pitiful bunches of green at the top, nothing beautiful about them. Every tree to be beautiful must have room to expand and develop in its proper proportions, and to retain the side branches with which nature always furnishes them, unless she is thwarted by the bungling hand of the hired man with axe or saw.

Street trees should never be planted to be ultimately less than forty feet apart. Most of the better shade trees are slow of growth. It is advisable to plant quicker growing trees between them for immediate effect, to be cut out later when they begin to crowd and injure each other.

Often when this time comes the quick growing tree is so much larger and finer looking that the owner's heart fails him and he compromises by hacking the branches off all the row, running them all, and affording only temporary relief. In a few years the quicker growing varieties begin to die and soon a straggly row of melancholy crippled exotics where might have been noble specimens good for generations to come.

Trees should never be planted so as to shade too densely a building where humans or animals abide. The sun must reach every part of a dwelling at least part of the day, or the doctor will be a frequent visitor.

Trees must not be planted in the center of a lawn. At the side or the rear is the place for them. A spreading apple tree or two in the back yard is good for shade and for fruit, if it is sprayed to kill insects and fungus diseases.

If the house is too densely shaded use the axe ruthlessly and open up a place to admit air and light. If two trees crowd each other select the best located, and cut down the other unless it is small enough to move. Don't trim. Cut down. One perfect tree is of more value than a yard full of crippled or stunted specimens.

How to Have Good Geraniums.

The geranium bed should be in a sunny place. Do not put it in the center of the lawn, because that dwarfs the place and spoils all artistic effect. If the bed is in too shady a place the plants grow long and slender and produce abundance of large leaves but do not bloom.

The soil in the bed should not be too rich. A little old rotted manure worked into the soil is all they want. In over-rich soil they grow too rank and do not bloom well. Geraniums unlike many other plants will do well year after year in the same bed.

Many people have trouble getting the plants out of pots. Turn the pot upside down, supporting the soil with the left hand, the stem of the plant between the fingers. Strike the top of the pot, turned down, sharply on a box or block of wood. The pot will then slip easily away from the soil, leaving the plant with its ball of earth in the left hand.

If the roots are densely matted pinch them to break them apart. No matter if you break the roots—it will do no harm. Plant them firmly a little deeper than they were in the pot. Give the bed a good working, then leave it alone, except to keep the top soil stirred, and the weeds down. Do not be always sprinkling the bed. When water is needed, give the bed a thorough soaking, and be sure to loosen the soil the next day.

FIRE HOSE TESTED AT THE WEST SIDE STATION TODAY

Two Thousand Feet of Fire-fighting Equipment Subjected to Test With New Pressure Pump.

One thousand feet of the fire hose that has been in use at the West Side station for some time, were tested this morning with the new pressure pump. Two hundred and fifty pounds and three hundred pounds of pressure were used and but three or four of the leads of hose, some of the oldest in the station, showed any defects, and some of these can be easily repaired. Others have the six-year guarantee of the company from which they were purchased and can be returned to them under this guarantee. The first test was with the bilateral

MACHINIST JOE SMITH NAMED NIGHT FOREMAN AT FORTIETH ST. YARDS

Shop Foreman at Janesville Promoted to More Responsible Position in Chicago.

Machinist Joseph Smith, who has been employed at the local round-house for the past three months, has been offered and has accepted the position of night foreman at Fortieth street, Chicago, and will assume the duties of his new position Saturday night. Although the night foremanship at the Chicago round-house is a difficult position, in view of the fact that it houses nearly fifty engines and over two hundred are handled there daily, Mr. Smith is expected to make good as he has been in the employ of the company for the past eleven years and is an experienced and skillful workman. Recently he was appointed shop foreman at the local round-house and those who have worked with him regret that he is to leave, although glad that he has been given a greater field in which to demonstrate his ability.

TWO SWITCH-ENGINES HAVE BEEN TAKEN OFF

Decrease in Freight Traffic Results in Cutting Down of Number of Engines.

As a result of the decrease in freight traffic during the past few weeks, the number of switch-engines in the local yards was cut down today. One day and one night switch-engine in the south yards have been taken off and the engine which usually went on at 9 a. m. has been made a half and half job. Engineers Wilson and Hiler and Fireman Dooley and Ashley have gone on the extra board.

Engineer Dudley and Fireman Gary on the Burlington turn around, number 582, were held up today until 10 o'clock as a result of the decrease in the number of switch-engines which made it impossible to get the train together.

With six names on the firemen's extra list this morning, the board presented a queer appearance. During the past winter, it has been unusual to see more than one or two.

Machinist William Welch, who has been at the hospital since he was injured last Monday, is reported to be improving rapidly and a speedy recovery is now hoped for.

Conductor Haven took out 54 this morning in place of Conductor Whitney who was forced to appear in a company suit.

The working outfit was ordered to FL. Atkinson this morning. An accident near the freight house last night, when four cars were damaged by being dropped too heavily, also kept the car repairers busy all day.

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. Engine 1607 on 192 failed at Beloit this morning and Engineer Kohler and Fireman Davies were forced to dead-head home on 128.

Engineer McCarthy and Fireman Higgins took an extra east this morning at 4:30 with engine 1771.

Superintendent L. R. Clouston of the C. & M. division, and Division Freight Agent A. A. Wilson are in the city today.

Engineer Kelly and Fireman Vohlan took 166 east this morning with engine 1611.

Engineer Meyer and Fireman Kellahan came in on an extra from the west last night at 12:20 with engine 658.

BEGINNING OF USE OF IRON

Hard to Trace Exactly, But Its Origin Is Thought to Have Been in Central Europe.

It is commonly believed that the use of iron commenced in either Africa or Asia. The latest investigations prove that it was not worked in Egypt until the ninth century before the Christian era, or in Libya until 450 B. C., that the Semites adopted its use still later, and that it has been known in Uganda only within the last five or six centuries. In China iron is first mentioned in 405 B. C. Bronze weapons were employed in China until 100 A.D., and in Japan until 700 A.D. According to a Mr. Hodgekay, who has investigated this subject, the metallurgy of iron must have originated in central Europe, especially in Noricum, which approximately represented modern Austria and Bavaria. Only at Hallstatt and in Bosnia and Transylvania, from which countries the Achaeans and Dorians are supposed to have migrated to Greece, are found evidences of a gradual introduction of iron, at first as an ornament applied to the bronze which it ultimately displaced. Everywhere also iron was introduced suddenly—a fact which implies a foreign origin. He says that meteoric iron was known in Egypt in remote antiquity, but no doubt it was worked as flats are worked, by cutting or chipping, and was not smelted. In other words, it was metallurgy, not the knowledge of iron that originated in central Europe.

THE DIFFERENCE

AND WHY

Of course you will acknowledge that heart disease is something serious. No matter what doctor you go to or what heart medicine you take, it contains digitalis. Common, cheap digitalis leaves are worth 20c a pound. One pound is a common dose. Good—The chances are that they are not. Cultivated physiologically tested digitalis leaves cost $2.75 a pound. Every pound is tested. The strength is ascertained with tests upon living animals and chemical reactions. The most successful physicians in all parts of the world acknowledge that only one preparation of digitalis is effective and that is a freshly made infusion of roots from the best leaves. All liquid, powders and tablets of this drug lose their strength in a very short time. A doctor is not prepared to make an infusion. The tablets are worthless. Therefore if you have any form of heart disease see that you get the right medicine made the right way. See that it is made by the right man. Digitalis is a drug that you should take only under a physician's orders. It is seldom used except with other drugs to moderate its action. Remember this if you have heart trouble. Consult a physician, let him write a prescription, for he cannot prepare the infusion. The making of medicine is not his study nor profession. Bring your prescription to Mr. Fleming, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, to be properly prepared according to the best knowledge of modern pharmacy. The medicine is the most important part—don't fool with dope. Hadger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River Sts. The Drug Store that makes a specialty of drugs.

Must Be Worth Seeing.
While on the subject of modern costume in sculpture, honorable mention must surely be made of the statue of Sir Sidney Waterlow, erected in the otherwise beautiful park bearing his name on the western slopes of the Highgate hill. It would take the skilled pen of an expert on the staff of the Tailor and Cutter to do full justice to the sartorial beauties of the sculptor's art. To the layman the outstanding features are a Trilby hat and an umbrella in one hand; a key, probably suggestive of prehistoric sanitary arrangements, in the other, and the body clothed in a frock coat and an overcoat. The name of the sculptor is not visible on the monument, and the park keepers will not divulge it. They are either ignorant or kindly.—London Chronicle.

Hairdressing Contest.
A novel entertainment took place recently in Berlin, under the auspices of the Dammferrrein and Peruckemacher-ergelferverein. A prize in the shape of a massive silver shield, appropriately inscribed, was contested for by 50 hairdressers. Each contestant endeavored to produce in the shortest time a "fashionable" or an "historical" arrangement of the hair of his model, and the man who secured the most points at the hands of the expert jury was to be proclaimed the victor. At a sign from the presiding officer, and to the music of "The Barber of Seville," the contest began before a large audience, and in 50 minutes a master from Bremen was declared the winner, with a "perfect, artistic creation of the directorate period."

Vegetable's Development.
Cabbage, in its many varieties, has been developed from a single wild growth called Brassica Oleracea, which in its wild state is very remote in appearance from our cabbage. Kale, cauliflower and collards come from the same origin. The principal cultivated varieties of all these are known to have existed as far back as the sixteenth century. Cabbage, however, is an infant compared to lettuce, though why a man would take to lettuce first when he could have cabbage or both just as well, seems singular.

TAXING PAUL.

J. J. Hill, the St. Paul railway man, has written an article for the "World's Work" on the taxation of wealth, in which he says:

"The modern theory that you can safely tax the wealthy is just as obnoxious as the medieval theory that you can safely oppress or kill the poor. It is obnoxious, not because wealth deserves special consideration, but because capital is the misapprehension of all industry and material development; and, after you have devoted so much of it to the unproductive purposes that the state represents when it transacts its primary function as keeper of the peace and administrator of justice, there will be just so much less left to pay out in wages and devote to the creation of other wealth."

"It is a fact, exactly as it is that when you subtract x from y, something less than y must remain. Of course, the laborer suffers even more than the capitalist. The countries in which such forms of taxation are being carried further are precisely those in which employment is scarce and precarious, and labor finds it necessary to lean more and more heavily each year upon the weakening arm of state and public charity. In fact, the whole subject is several thousand years old; and it is amazing to find modern legislatures mulling over it as it would be if they debated hotly the comparative advantages of the rack and the thumbscrew as instruments of torture."

"J. Ellis Barker, in the Fortnightly Review, in words as apt for the United States as they were for the British public, says:

"The policy of taxing the wealthy for the benefit of the masses, is not a new one. It was practiced by the Athenian democracy in the time of Cleon, and it led to the economic decay of Athens. It was practiced in ancient Rome, and it led to the economic decay of Rome. It was practiced by the Spaniards, who plundered and drove out the wealthy Moorish, who in the middle ages had made Spain a flourishing and wealthy industrial country, and it led to the economic decay of Spain. Throughout antiquity and the middle ages we meet with examples of the policy of taxing the rich out of existence for the benefit of the poor, and ruin has invariably been the result of that popular and democratic policy."

"So it has been throughout history; and so it will be with us, unless we are wise enough to avoid the heavy rock on which are plainly inscribed the legends and the warnings of the nations that made shipwreck there."

Heart to Heart.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

NEVER TOO LATE.

J. W. Jones of Gloucester, O., aged seventy-three years, certified to the supreme court that he had begun the study of law preparatory to admission to the bar.

As three years' study are required, Mr. Jones will be seventy-six when he is admitted to practice.

On the other hand—

The other day a man aged thirty-five, of large property, was heard to remark, "I would give everything I have for an education." He did not mean it.

There is a woman now in the Oberlin college who began a course in the age of seventy which to complete will require her presence in the college classes until she is eighty.

A man above the age of seventy recently applied for admission to the Missouri State university.

It is never too late to get an education.

Do you remember the story of the little German woman of Chicago who was left a widow at thirty with three children and who educated herself? She entered the high school, sitting alongside the boys and girls, some of whom thoughtlessly made fun of her poor English. She supported herself and children by sewing at night.

Now that she has completed her high school course at the age of thirty-four what do you suppose she intends to do?

She is planning to spend four more years in a normal school to fit herself for teaching. Some of the children have grown up and will help the mother.

The fact is there is no excuse this side of laziness for any one to say, "It is too late for me to get an education."

Go into the college classes and note the presence of the large number of men and women in middle life.

Think of the thousands who, denied school privileges, are taking courses in correspondence schools, receiving their lessons, making their credits and taking their examinations, all by means of the mail.

And think of the other thousands, many of them married women, who are supplementing a meager school education by taking Chautauque courses or by means of literary and study clubs.

Do you want an education? If you have a real desire the accomplishment is possible. It all depends upon your will power.

There was a day when ignorance was excusable. That day is past. Men and women, many of them, were denied an education in a former generation. Today whosoever will may drink deep of the Plinian spring.

PRESS COMMENT.

Equally Nonsensical.

And Italy has the same sort of living problem. Expenses have increased 50 to 100 per cent. Insurgents lay it to the Payne tariff, and Italians to the comet.—Madison Journal.

Chronic Kickers.

Great papers, the La Follette organs, "They jump on Taft when he stays in Washington and 'interfere' with congress and they jump harder on him when he goes away from the capital and 'neglects' business."—Eau Claire Leader.

Not Sinkers.

The Chicago School of Domestic Science has become to the rescue of the much-abused doughnut, and declares it is not indigestible, but that it is a "nutritive, heart-giving, healthful food. This probably applies, however, to those doughnuts that have a specific gravity less than cast iron."—Sheboygan Journal.

Proletariat.

It is claimed by La Follette adherents, that the "common" people are still for the senator and desire his reelection. It is to be regretted if there are enough "common" people in this state to achieve this unfortunate result. It should be the aim and desire of every Wisconsin citizen to rise above being "common." It is nothing to be proud of.—Wausau Record-Herald.

Like the Devil Fish.

The mongrels, under the leadership of La Follette, will harrow the people and make the "twelve ring" with noisy threats against "Taft, Cannon, Aldrich, the interests, corporations, big business, Standard Oil, Rockefeller, Morgan, railroads, tariff and anything and everything that will aid them in muddling the minds of the voters. The real object of their campaign will be to re-elect La Follette."—Antigo Journal.

Getting Moist Again.

The dry weather seems to be ebbing some. The last elections in Wisconsin and Illinois showed losses for the anti-slaveryists. The primary in Alabama gave the local optimists a victory over the state wide prohibitionists. The last figures from the internal revenue offices indicate that the consumption of beer during the preceding month was larger than the same month last year. The anti-slaveryists indignantly feel that it is only a lull in the fight.—Marquette Eagle-Star.

Striking Back.

President Taft has not before doubt the insistent forces such a blow as the appointment of ex-Congressman Jenkins of Wisconsin to the Porto Rican bench. Judge Jenkins was one of the sacrifices of the insurgent party in this state, being de-fected by Irving L. Lantree in a typical campaign two years ago. His appointment has been rumored for a long time and the La Follette and insurgent strength at Washington brought everything to bear to prevent it. But President Taft did not let politics interfere with his selection of an able man for the place, especially politics of the La Follette, Cooper, Lantree type.—Beloit Free Press.

Those Higher Up.

The confessions of White, Becke-meyer and Link and the indictments of Browne and Wilson are important events in the progress of the investigation of the rotten mess afforded by the last session of the Illinois legislature but the climax will not have been reached until the source of all this corruption is revealed. What the public wants to know and what it has a right to know is who furnished the money with which to purchase senatorial votes at $1,000 each and fill a good sized "jackpot." The work of the grand jury will not be complete until this information is brought to light.—Pont du Lac Common-wealth.

Coming Into Her Own.

Beautiful Venus is gaining more distinction and lustration these days than for 75 years, or since Halley's comet was here before. Good people looking for the cometary visitor will find Venus in the morning and become ecstatic. What a wonderful comet indeed! What Venus is some casual extremity. That brilliant planet rarely can be nothing but Halley's wanderer whose tail is obscured in the vagueness of space and must be unfolded to view later. So argues the rapt observer, gazing awestruckly over Monoma and quite hyperbolic in the description he gives to late sleepers of the marvelous phases of the wondrous spectacle. Meantime Venus sweetly smiles, accepting with maidenly grace the admiration of which she has so long been deprived.

THE KING IS DEAD.

The king lies dead in his purple room, where the threads and the acceptance of her and her neighbors' cottage is filled with gloom—that is mourned by more to me. The king is mourned by a million souls, the king who is white and dumb and over his country the dead March rolls, and the sound of the muffled drum. So the king won't care if I do not weep, or tear for my friends, who keep their watch over a dying child. "The king is dead; but round the corner a poor man lies, and groans in his lowly bed; I'll rattle there in my awkward style, and moisten his forehead with my tears, and try to bring to his face a smile, and cheer up his weary frame. The king has gone where his forbears wait in stately and hushed repose; a cripple comes to suit of garden gate, and I'll give him a suit of clothes. The king has gone to the silent bourn where all of the monarchs roam; I'm sorry—but when I have time to mourn, I'll do it for folks near home."

—WALT MASON.

Average Age of Clergymen.

In the English Church Times the clerical obituary for 1909 contains 461 names. The ages of 370 of the deceased clergymen are mentioned, and these show the attainment of an average age of 71½ years.

WHICH WON?

"Yes," said the determined man, "when Taft was elected the smallness of my tax took the sting out of the proprietor of the restaurant."

"And what did the proprietor do?"

"He gave the waiter some money out of his own pocket and apologized to him for having such a customer."

"How are you so sure that we're going to have warm weather from now on?"

"Well, I've been trying to make the furnace burn right all winter, and I finally succeeded this morning."

LIKED HIS FATHER.

"Don't you know that little boys who swear don't go to heaven?"

"That's all right answer. I'd rather be with pa anyhow."

CAMPAIGN FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN WAS OPENED LAST NIGHT

With Rousing Meeting Held in the Methodist Church by Dr. Perry Edwards Powell.

The Young Men's Campaign in this city for the organization of clubs of the "Knights of the Holy Grail" was commenced last evening with a meeting held at the Methodist church. The parade of seven automobiles, decorated with placards announcing the campaign and filled with young men and boys, Dr. Perry Edwards Powell, who has charge of the work in this city, conducted the gathering last evening. A large number of the boys were present and first steps toward the organization of a chorus were taken. Dr. Everett H. Naffziger, Dr. Powell's co-worker, will arrive in the city and take charge of the musical part of the campaign. He will sing two solos at the meeting tonight and it is expected that in a short time will have a chorus of one hundred boys singing and whistling.

At the meeting last evening, Dr. Powell outlined the work of the Grail. The order is international, sixteen denominations being represented in the chapters in every state of the union and some of the small provinces of Canada. Besides the moral side of the order, there is the question of physical welfare, which is well looked after. Baseball and basketball games are played; there are field meets; and summer camps are also included in the work of fun for the members. In this city a membership in the Young Men's Christian association is included with the membership in the Grail. The members are ranked according to their age. Only boys fifteen years of age and over are admitted to knighthood. The younger members from 12 to 16 years being chosen as squire, and those from 9 to 12 as pages.

Dr. Powell has a way with the boys and young men, and the meeting held last evening was most enthusiastic. Judging from the results of the work in other cities where he has been recently and fifty members in this city. His assistant, Mr. Naffziger, is particularly well suited for the work he is engaged in. His love for young people has won for him the name of the "boy's and girls' evangelist." His "boyish" work will be with the boys' chorus, but he is equally good as a speaker.

The meetings are open to everyone and a cordial invitation has been extended to the parents and young men, as well as all the boys, to attend. The subject of Dr. Powell's talk this evening will be "Plumps for Keeps."

BRIEF LOCAL NOTES.

Missed the Car: Two young ladies from the Second ward, who have to "bitch the light, fantastic too," were in "bitch Tuesday" evening at the dance given by the Leaver's orchestra and were enjoying themselves so immensely that they forgot the time and missed the last car home. They went to the home of a friend intending to stay there, but found no one there and finally hired a carriage to bring them to this city. Their worrying relatives were relieved of a great deal of anxiety when the young women appeared at home in the wee small hours of the morning.

New Assistant Engineer: G. E. Hellick, recently engaged in topographical work for the United States government and located at Baldwin, Wis., has taken a position in Janesville as assistant city engineer.

Weirick Case Closed: In the account of the Weirick case published in yesterday's issue it was stated that Miss Belle Stoddard, deputy register, admitted on cross examination that at different periods she spent about two weeks at the residence, and afterwards more than made up that time. "The first part of this account was erroneous. Miss Stoddard stated that during a period of two weeks she spent about two hours a day on the books."

Julia Myers Much Improved: Mrs. Julia Myers, who has been confined to bed with a broken hip for many weeks, is slowly improving and was taken downstairs in a wheeled chair this morning.

mount on the launching stand, the christening bottle poised for the first move of the ship. Suddenly there was a grinding sound, the weakened beam gave way and the giant hull began to move down the ways. At the same moment Naval Constructor William J. Baxter, who supervised the construction of the vessel, gave the signal to the sponsor, Miss Fleming, with admirable self-possession hurled the bottle of sparkling wine at the prow and exclaimed in a clear voice: "I christen thee 'Florida'."

Gaining speed every moment, the great hull glided rapidly down the ways into the lower bay, leaving its first touch of water at a few minutes before eleven o'clock. As the future war terror settled in the water the crowd gave vent to a great cheer, which was soon drowned by the playing of the marine bands and the din created by the booming of cannon and the screech of countless whistles.

Immediately after the luncheon there was an official luncheon at which the guests included Governor Gilchrist of Florida and his staff, Miss Fleming and her maids of honor, Secretary of the Navy Meyer, Rear Admiral Schroeder, Walnwright, Patton and others, Naval Constructor Baxter, members of the senate and house committees on naval affairs, and eminent representatives of the state and city of New York. A hearty greeting from President Taft added interest to the affair.

"The, 'Florida' is the latest word in battleships, although England and Germany have prepared plans for super-Floridas. She is the heaviest warship that has ever been launched in the United States, weighing 9,000 tons as she glided down the ways today, which is 1,000 tons more than the 'Utah' weighed when she was launched at Camden last December. The construction of the 'Florida' was authorized by congress in 1907, and her keel was laid down at the Brooklyn yard on March 9, 1909. It is now 68 per cent completed and is expected to be ready for sea before the summer of 1911."

The "Florida" is 226 feet long and has a beam of 36 feet 3 inches at main draught of 27 feet 3 inches. The armor consists of a belt 11 inch thick amidships, which is more the 8 feet wide. Above this is a second belt 8 feet wide of an average thickness of 9 inches. The lower water line belt is continuous from stem to stern, while the upper belt tapers from the forward to the after trunk.

A single broadside from a heavy "Ida" will be almost twice as heavy as that of the entire fleet of Dewey at Manila Bay. Her main batteries will consist of ten 16-inch guns mounted in pairs in balanced turrets. Each of these guns weighs 50 tons. In addition to these big guns the battleship will have a secondary battery of fourteen 5-inch rapid-fire guns, four 3-pounders, four 1-pounders, two machine guns, two field guns and two submerged torpedo tubes.

STILL PERIL ON THE DEEP

Mariners Have No Real Reason to Complain of Lack of Ex- citement.

The vigilance of sailors, the multiplication of lighthouses and lightships and the invention of devices of warning have still not robbed the seas of their might. If romance demands risk of life and limb, the drama of man against the elements, then there is plenty of romance left. In the days of the clipper ships the sailor folk spoke of headlands and of certain groups of islands as ocean graveyards. "These rocks and reefs will claim their booty." "By the bloodsuds of God," said the devout Newfoundland-lander, "we have been sent a run of fish and a few good wrecks." Cape Race, upon the Newfoundland coast, takes a heavy toll in property and human lives every winter. Cape Cod, controlled by scores of life savers and lighted its whole length, is mentioned in wreck reports with unbroken regularity. The traveler upon a vessel passing Sandy Hook notes the signs of a wreck, and those signs continue, though savers are ever at work thereabouts. Hatteras maintains its ancient notoriety. The Lizard, upon the English coast, is strewn around with hulks of great steamers, and the Selly Islands are among the terrors of the deep, though their shores bristle with lighthouses. Those who like the spice of danger with their journeying about the earth have still no reason to complain.

Water in Ancient Times.
Over 4,000 years ago an elaborate system of filtration was established by the Egyptians to purify the waters of the Nile. In both Rome and Athens hot water was drunk in preference to cold by the small minority who used water for drinking purposes. Chamberlain, writing in 1550, notes that the habit of drinking hot water was spreading among all classes in France. "Some warm it by holding over the fire, others by turning bread into it. Rich people plunge a bar of hot gold into the water before drinking it, and the less wealthy a bar of hot iron, while the very poor are content to warm their drink with a live coal."

Satisfied.
The reason some men never reach the top is because they're quite satisfied with the scenery and companions they find at the bottom.

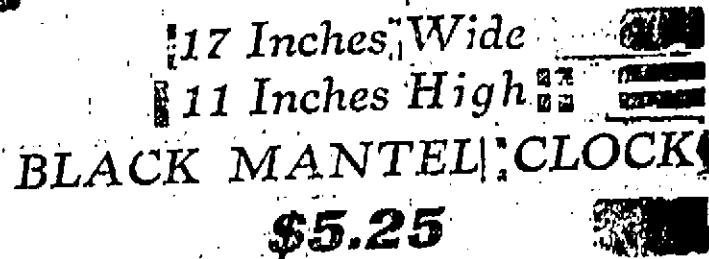

Automobile interest now centers in the annual endurance run of the American Automobile association for the Golden and Chicago trophies. This year will start from Cincinnati, June 15, ending in Chicago on July 1. From Cincinnati the tourists will go south and west to get back to Chicago, a route that will be a severe test for any car. Entries are already being received for the event by the touring Painful Recollection.

"Speaking of these abandoned farms," said the suburban grocer, wiping his nose with his once white apron, "I abandoned a good one myself 15 years ago, and came to town because I thought I could get richer quicker here—blame my fool hide!"

Advice From Dickens.
You will find it serviceable, in the formation of a demeanor, if you sometimes say to yourself in company—or entering a room, for instance—papa potatoes, poultry, prunes and prison—Dickens. "Little Boock."

Professors on the Golf Links.
There is one profession of whose golding members we have made some special study, being attracted thereto by the curious anomalies they present in this matter, and that is the teaching profession. By universal consent professors of all sorts are the worst players to be found on the links.
So notorious is this that the following classification on the various grades of golf has been generally accepted as correct, and though it has been repeatedly published it has never been challenged by any of the unfortunate class whom it holds up to public obloquy. The classification of golf according to social position is as follows:
"Professional, first class amateur, and dilett, ladies', duffers', parlor, infant and professors."

Steep Holm—a Dustless Island.
In the middle of the Bristol channel stands Steep Holm—a bleak and barren looking island, rising 250 feet from the water that washes its craggy coast—of which, it is reported, a well-known resident of Weston-super-Mare has taken a 21 years' lease. The island is 40 acres in extent, of which 11 are leased by the British government for 999 years, and five forts have been erected, guarding the channel like another Gibraltar. T. A. Road of Newport road, Cardiff, has been in possession of the remainder of the island for five years, and says it is the healthiest place in Europe. Dust is unknown, and the island would be an ideal place for a sanatorium. In olden times it was the home of smugglers.

WOOL SUITS and SPRING COATS

We are Making Close Prices to Reduce Them

RIGHT NOW is the height of the buying season for much wearing apparel and our stock is in great condition for large selling. On Wool Suits and Spring Coats we have had an unusually large sale. On account of assortments being broken somewhat we are making close prices to reduce them. It will pay to investigate. We give a great deal of thought and painstaking attention to the buying of our Suits, Coats, Skirts, Waists, Dresses, and other garments, pass by a great many lines shown us by agents on account of their not coming up to our standard. "We Keep the Quality Up" and it is reflected in every garment we sell. They must be as good as the market affords to sell at a stated price.

The best garment that money can buy to sell at $5.00, $10.00, $15.00, etc.
All garments marked in plain figures so that you can see the original price and the savings you make.

While we hear reports from different parts of the state that the business in Ready-to-Wear Garments is not up to standard, we can truthfully say that trade in our ready-to-wear section has been unusually large and is keeping up wonderfully well.

The best indication that The Big Store's wearing apparel is popular is the fact that people are kept busy constantly in the alteration department.

FUTURE SOCIETY BUDS AND STATESMEN.

Upper left, Daughter of United States Senator Crawford of North Dakota. Upper right, Children of United States Congressman J. D. Bennett of New York. Lower left, Children of H. L. Godwin of North Carolina. Lower right, Reed Knox, Jr., Grandson of the Secretary of State.

Washington, D. C.—The happy, pretty children seen around the palatial homes of the senators and congressmen always excite the interest of those visiting the Capital city. There are hundreds of these children romping over the green lawns at this spring season. Little Miss Crawford, daughter of United States Senator Crawford of South Carolina, is one of these. She is one of the most beautiful little girls and always excites the admiration of those who see her. She has grown very fond of her new friends in Washington, but is looking forward to the closing of school to return to her home friends in South Dakota. The three children of Congressman Bennett of New York are unusually attractive. Congressman H. L. Godwin of North Carolina is proud of his two little girls and his boy. They have the sunny dispositions and temperament typical of the south and are very popular among their friends. The sturdy grandson of Secretary of State Knox is a "chip of the old block," and the way he handles his "granddad" proves his capacity for diplomacy. Some day this lad may follow the steps of the secretary of state and be a world figure.

No insult.

He—I never look at you without thinking of a managaria.

She—Sir!

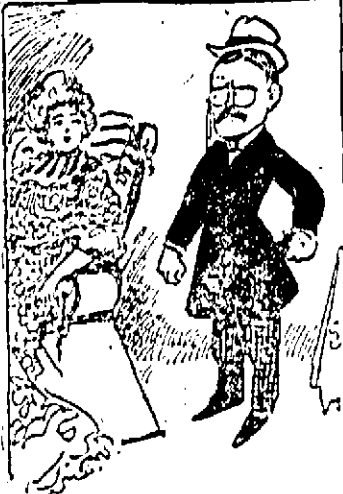

He—Yes, your dear face and taper fingers, you know.

Two Evils.

"It must be awful to be caught with the goods on you."

"It's worse to be caught with the goods off you. I forgot three of my wife's errands yesterday."

NEEDED ONE, ANYWAY.

Benham—Anybody here while I was away?

Mrs. Benham—Yes, a man with a red beard.

Benham—What did he want?

Mrs. Benham—He looked as if he wanted a shave.

No Wonder He Thrived.

Willie lived in a family where every thing was sterilized. The word was rather too big for him to remember, but he thought he got near enough to it when he answered the lady's question, "How is the baby?" with "He's growing fine, ma'am; he gets cellular milk."

England's Village Theater.

The village of Aldbourne, England, though it is seven miles from a railway station, has a theater of its own, which was opened recently with a performance of a three-act cottage drama, "The Village Wedding." Charles McEvoy, the dramatist, who lives at Aldbourne, has transformed a barn in his grounds into "The Aldbourne Village Theater," complete in every essential, even in the matter of an emergency exit, provided by the large double doors. The play, which is by Mr. McEvoy, was acted by a company of villagers, who spoke in the true Wiltshire dialect, and gave the place an air of convincing realism. Lord Howard de Walden, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Shaw, Granville Barker and William Archer were among those who witnessed the inauguration of the new theater.

Horseshoes.

There were horseshoes as far back as history can take us, but they were not iron ones fastened by nails to the hoof. When such shoes first came into use will probably never be known. The ancient horseshoes—those used by the Greeks, Romans and others—were plates covering the entire bottom of the foot and fastened by thongs fixed about the animal's ankle. The oldest horseshoe mules found by antiquaries date back to the time of Childeur I, who died in 481. It is generally understood that horseshoes were introduced into England by William the Conqueror, in 1066.

Good Health Hint.

For hard-working persons, especially brain workers, an excellent health preserver is the habit of spending a half hour lying prone, in the middle of the day; best if combined with recreation and fresh air.

Brooklyn to Be Great City.

At the present rate of growth the borough of Brooklyn, with its population of about 1,340,000, will have a population of 2,310,000 in 20 years from now.

BURMAH HOME OF THE RUBY

Practically All the Valuable Stones Are the Product of That Country's Mines.

All the world's great rubies come from the mines of the Mogok valley, India. There are four principal mines in the valley, in each of which modern tools and machinery are used, which facilitate the proper examination of a large amount of beryl or ruby-bearing clay each day. In the nearby valleys the Burmans still prosecute their searches in the old way, digging and washing by hand labor, but often with astonishing results. In the large workings the system has been reduced to a science, with corresponding results. The work goes on day and night. The ruby-bearing clay is extracted by the open quarry method of removing all the surface down to the valuable clay, which is then dug up, carried on trolleys to the stone cleansing mill, washed, passed through the sieves, and then examined for rubies and spinels. The beryl stretches almost everywhere along the Mogok valley, and wherever this clay exists rubies are to be found. Besides the pure ruby, spinel or balas rubies are found in large quantities in the same neighborhood. Wherever the ruby is found the spinel is sure to crop up close beside it. They are both crystals of alumina, but of different shapes. Except in a few rare cases the expert can easily distinguish between the two stones, although they are very much alike to the naked eye. The Burman is inclined to invest his savings in rubies and diamonds, which may be readily realized upon in times of financial stress. Rubies are more precious than diamonds, and are practically indestructible except by fire. During the season as many as 2,000 Burmans are employed in the mines.

Growth of Languages.
All of the languages we know of grew out of other languages. Latin came from Ocean, Etruscan and Greek.

Parisian Sage Girls

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charm of a beautiful woman lies in her hair.

Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of Paris are famed for their beauty not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre and strength to the hair.

Up to three years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in America. People's Drug Co. sell it in Janeville for 50 cents a large bottle, and they guarantee it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair, to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand, the People's Drug Co. will give you your money back if it fails. Made only in America by Gironx Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Story of Helena von Ritz.
There is a very true woman's heart a spark of heavenly fire, which burns and shines in the dark hours of adversity.—Washington Irving.

"But madam; but madam!" I tried to begin. At last, after moments which seemed to me ages long, I broke out: "But once, at least, you promised to tell me who and what you are. Will you do that now?"

"Yes! yes!" she said. "Now I shall finish the clearing of my soul. You, after all, shall be my confessor."

We heard again a faltering footfall in the hallway. I raised an eyebrow in query.

"It is my father. Yes, but let him come. He also must hear. He is indeed the author of my story, such as it is."

"Father," she added, "come, sit you here. I have something to say to Mr. Fritz."

She seated herself now on one of the low couches, her hands clasped across her arm, her eyes looking far away out of the little window, beyond which could be seen the hills across the wide Patomac.

"We are foreigners," she went on, "as you can tell. I speak your language better than my father does, because I was younger when I learned. It is quite true he is my father. He is an Austrian nobleman, of one of the old families. He was educated in Germany, and of late has lived there."

"I could have told most of that of you both," I said.

She bowed and resumed:

"My father was always a student. As a young man in the university, he was devoted to certain theories of his own. 'No est-ce pas vrai, mon drole?'" she asked, turning to put her arm on her father's shoulder as he dropped weakly on the couch beside her.

He nodded. "Yes, I was student," he said. "I was not content with the ways of my people."

"So, my father, you will see," said she, smiling at him, "being much determined on anything which he attempted, decided, with few others, to make a certain experiment. It was the strangest experiment, I presume, ever made in the interest of what is called science. It was wholly the most curious and the most cruel thing ever done."

She hesitated now. All I could do was to look from one to the other, wondering.

"This dear old dreamer, my father, then, and I were others."

"I name them?" he interrupted. "There were Karl von Goertz, Albrecht Hardman, Adolph zu Sternberg, Karl von Starneck, and Rudolph von Wardenburg. We were all friends."

"Yes," she said softly, "all friends, and all fools. Sometimes I think of my mother."

"My dear, your mother?"

"But I must tell this as it was! Then, sir, these six, all noble-born men, all well born, men of fortune, all men devoted to science, and interested in the study of the humanness of the average human being in central Europe—these fools, or heroes, I say not which they decided to do something in the interest of science. They were of the belief that human beings were becoming poor in type. So they determined to marry."

"Naturally," said I, seeking to relieve a delicate situation—"they scorned the marriage of convenience—they came to our American way of thinking, that they would marry for love."

"You do them too much credit!" said she slowly. "That would have meant no sacrifice on either side. They married with the deliberate intention of improving individuals of the human species! Father, is it not so?"

Some speech stumbled on her tongue; but she raised her hand. "Listen to me, I will be fair to you, father, fairer than you were either to yourself or to my mother."

"Yes, these six concluded to improve the grade of human animals! They resolved to marry among the penitents—because thus they could select finer specimens of womanhood, younger, stronger, more fit to bring children into the world. Is not that the truth, my father?"

"It was the way we thought," he whispered. "It was the way we thought was wise."

"And perhaps it was wise. It was selection. So now they selected. Two of them married German working girls, and those two are dead, but there is no child of them alive. Two married in Austria, and of these one died, and the other is in a madhouse. One married ried a young 'Galleian' girl, and so found of her did he become that she took him down from his station to here, and he was lost. The other—"

"Yes; it was my father," she said, at length. "There he sits, my father. Yes, I love him. I would forfeit my life for him now—I would lay it down gladly for him. Better had I done so. But in my time I have hated him."

"He, the last one, searched long for this fitting animal to lead to the altar. He was tall and young and handsome and rich, do you see? He could have chosen among his own people any woman he liked. Instead, he searched among the Galleians, the lower Austrians, the Prussians. He examined Bavaria and Saxony. Many he found, but still none to suit his scientific ideas. He betrothed him then of searching among the Hungarians, where, it is said, the most beautiful women of the world are found. So at last he found her, that peasant, my mother!"

"The silence in the room was broken at last by her low, even, hopeless voice as she went on:

"Now, this Hungarian is a slave to Austria. They do as they are bid, those who live on the great estates. They have no hope. If they rebel, they are cut down. They are not a people. They belong to no one, not even to themselves."

"My God!" said I, a sigh-breaking from me in spite of myself. I raised my hand as though to bow her not to go on. But she persisted.

"Yes, we, too, called upon our gods! So, now, my father came among that people and found there a young girl, one much younger than himself. She was the most beautiful, so they say, of all those people, many of whom are very beautiful."

"Yes—proof of that!" said I. She knew I meant no idle flattery.

"Yes, she was beautiful. But at first she did not fancy to marry this Austrian student nobleman. She said no to him, even when she found who he was and what his station—even when she found that he meant her no dishonor. But our ruler heard of it, and, being displeased at this mockery of the traditions of the court, and wishing in his arduous mind to teach these foolish young nobles to rue well their bargain, he sent word to the girl that she must marry this man—my father. It was made an imperial order!"

"And so now, at last, since he was half crazed by her beauty, as men are sometimes by the beauty of women,

"Yes; it was my father," she said at length.

and since at last this had its effect with her, as sometimes it does with women, and since it was perhaps death or some severe punishment if she did not obey, she married him—my father."

"And loved me all her life!" the old man broke out. "Never had man love like hers, I will tell you. I will tell you that I loved her, always and always; and I loved her always, with all my heart!"

"Yes," said Helena von Ritz, "they two loved each other, even as they were. So here am I, born of that love."

Now we all sat silent for a time. "That birth was at my father's estates," resumed the same even, merciless voice. "After some short time of travels, they returned to the estates; and, yes, there I was born, half noble, half peasant; and then there began the most cruel thing the world has ever known."

"The nobles of the court and of the country all around began to make existence hideous for my mother. The aristocracy, insulted by the republicanism of these young noblemen, made life a hell for the most gentle woman of Hungary. Ah, they found new ways to make her suffer. They allowed her to share in my father's estates, allowed her to appear with him when he could prevail upon her to do so. Then they twisted and taunted her and mocked her in all the devilish ways of their class. She was more beautiful than any court beauty of them all, and they hated her for that. She had a good mind, and they hated her for that. She had a faithful, loyal heart, and they hated her for that."

"But your father resented this?"

She nodded. "Duel after duel he fought, man after man he killed, thanks to his love for her and his manhood. He would not release what he loved. He would not allow his name to be separated from his choice. But the women! Ah, he could not fight them! So I have hated women, and made war on them all my life. My father could not please his emperor. So, in short, that scientific experiment ended in misery—and me!"

"The room had grown dimmer. The sun was sinking as she talked. There was silence, I know, for a long time before she spoke again."

"In time, then, my father left his estates and went out to a small place in the country; but my mother—her heart was broken. Malice pursued her. Those who were called her superiors would not let her alone. See, she weeps, my father, as he thinks of these things."

"There was cause, then, to weep. For two years, they tell me, my mother wept. Then she died. She gave me a baby, to her friend, a woman of her village—Therese Mazoff. You have seen her. She has been my mother ever since. She has been the sole guardian I have known all my life. She has not been able to do with me as she would have liked."

"You did not live at your own home with your father?" I asked.

Original Miniatures.
The original miniatures were the small pictures with which manuscripts were illuminated in the middle ages. They got their name not on account of their minute size, but because they were colored with minium (red-lead), whence came the Italian designation miniature. Following the invention of the art of printing and engraving, miniature painting entered a new phase, and the word came to mean in popular parlance simply a small portrait.
